The Week in Oxford County

A scholarship at the University of Maine was granted a second year to Miss Joyce L. Noble of South Paris. The fund for the scholarship was established by the late Mr. Claude E. Warwick of New York to aid young people orphaned by the death of a parent during World War II. Seventeen students are helped this year.

The car of Robert Grant of Fryeburg Harbor was totally wrecked Sunday when it went out of control between North Lovell and East Durham. Grant suffered only minor bruises.

Miss Tracy Dorey of Canton suffered a possible pelvic injury and was taken to the hospital on Sunday when she was struck by a car driven by Robert Gifford of Canton. She was taken to the Rumford hospital.

Eleven teachers have been added to the staff of the Mexico public schools. The enrollment has increased about 100 since 1947.

Maurice Churchill and Howard Tandy, both of Bethel, were committed to jail from the Norway Municipal Court on Monday. They was damaged. The horses were found guilty to breaking, enter, injured.

DRIVER TRAINING COURSE AVAILABLE AGAIN AT GOULD

Forty-two students took advantage of the Driver Training Course which was introduced for the first time at Gould Academy last year and will be continued this year. Most of these students secured Maine driver's licenses and others who are non-residents took tests for licenses in their respective states during the vacation period.

The Driver Training Course is made possible through the courtesy of Bennett's Garage which furnishes the dual control car and the American Automobile Association which supplies much of the instructional material.

MAINE'S FOREST FIRE LOSSES CONTINUE TO DECLINE

Effective forest protection, plus a Keep Maine Green consciousness citizenry continued to cut down forest fire losses in the Pine Tree State during 1950. Last year 927 forest fires burned 18,002 acres of timberland. All of Maine's 10,778,000 acres of forestland are under organized protection.

This acreage loss was 3,000 less than in 1949 and less than half that of 1948. Careless smokers continued to be the chief cause of forest fires. In 1950 they were credited with starting 344 fires. Debris burners started 212. Together they started more than half the woods fires reported during the year.

This information is contained in a report now being distributed by American Forest Products Industries, national sponsor of the Keep America Green program, underway in 26 states. Maine had its Keep Green campaign underway last year.

Commenting on Maine's fire prevention record, J. T. McLean, chief forester for AFPI, stated the need for greater education by the public in preventing woods fires since most woods fires are caused by local residents.

He was born at Woodstock, Dec. 3, 1898, the son of Charles and Florence McLean. He had lived several years in West Bethel and about 10 years ago moved to Bethel Pond.

He was a member of the West Bethel Union Church. Pleasant Valley Grange of West Bethel and was a past chairman of Patriotic Relief Co. M. R. King of Vassalboro, a fire control record.

Chief Forester McLean declared: "An alert public aware of its collective responsibility for preventing fire in the woods can keep America's forest green, growing, and productive."

The AFPI report, based on U. S. Forest Service figures, emphasizes the continuing need for full public support federal and state fire control agencies. It points out that continued cooperation between industry, the public agencies and woodland owners in preventing fire is an integral part of the nation's defense program.

A Dangerous Situation

Nearly every edition of every daily and weekly newspaper in the nation has several news dispatches on its front page reporting on activities or issues that involve the economic welfare of every citizen. Yet economics is a subject on which few people are well informed. In other words, a great deal is happening and a great many things are being proposed to our nation today affecting your welfare and more, on which few people feel really qualified to pass judgement.

This is a dangerous situation. It could permit drastic fundamental changes to be made in the American way of life and never injure to our living standard. An awareness of this situation has led me to continually expand the Harding College National Training Program to give wider distribution of economic education materials. In the past ten years general knowledge on what makes the American system tick has been improving. But ignorance of the simple basic facts of economics still extends to millions of Americans and constitutes a critical situation.

The Brookings Report

The Alfred P. Sloan Foundation last year commissioned the Brookings Institution of Washington to make a study of what is being done to meet needs and obstacles to improve the popularization of understanding of economics. After 10 months of work by Dr. H. M. Macleod, Brookings president, and Dr. W. McRae, chairman of the Department of Economics at Westminster College, New Haven, Conn., these just recently made their report to the Sloan Foundation. It begins by defining "economic education" as helping people to gain understanding of the forces and factors that produce a higher standard of living.

Here are some major Brookings findings of value reflected in every American:

1. Help a very small percentage of our high school students gain real grasp of the economic forces and forces that are responsible for higher standards of living. Only one percent take the equivalent of a semester course in economics.

No Real Appraisal

2. Most of the six most widely used high school textbooks do not even offer a description of the principal features of the capitalist, socialist, and communist systems. Only fifteen teachers of economics in our schools are able to appraise the merits of the merits of the several types of economic systems.

3. The most widely used single textbook was written by an author who is most sympathetic with the socialist forces of recent times in the U. S. Though he goes out that you must govern more closely may affect business behavior.

4. The professional preparation of the economics teachers seems terribly low. Indeed, a great majority of the educational institutions said that it was virtually impossible to get a person well trained in economics.

Economics Discredited

5. Very few of every four college students considers one of these economic systems.

6. None of the textbooks most widely used in American colleges gives a strong exposition of the various types of private enterprise. In short none of them emphasizes the advantages of private enterprise without stressing the good points. Some are emphasizing the right and wrong of private enterprise, so far as to the point question which is right or wrong, usually difficult to answer in the future.

7. It is clear that the majority

Disaster Can Lead to Success

SAMUEL KRAJCI, Chicago, Illinois, believes that any difficult situation can be conquered if somebody has the will to do it.

It was in 1926, during America's "prosperous" years, previous to the depression that hit us in 1929, and Celotex was the product being manufactured by Mr. Krajci's company.

In 1926 the Louisiana sugar cane crop was most promising. Good news to the Celotex experts who were depending upon this crop to furnish the fiber for the synthetic board. Cane fiber was the life-blood of their manufacturing plant.

Then came bad news! Just before the grinding season started, a Moses disease spread like wildfire throughout the fields. There was no crop! And the plant's equipment was suitable for making board only out of sugar cane fiber. It was easy to see what would happen to business. Quickly they took stock of the situation, found out what they had on hand to work with. Just enough left over from the previous year to carry them for three months.

Then suddenly somebody came forth with the idea that they try to find a substitute for cane fiber. Seemed absurd, particularly as their plant was geared to cane fiber.

Then came good news! Louisiana's second greatest crop—rice—could be utilized since 20 per cent of rice straw could be added without affecting the product. So they hired planes to scout the rice fields and bought from the farmers on the spot. Now they had 10 more days to live!

During this time, they went to Cuba, bought enough sugar cane fiber to tide them over until another Louisiana sugar cane crop could be produced.

But that wasn't all the good wrought by this company. Their difficulty resulted in the development of disease-resistant strains of sugar cane and cane fiber in Louisiana was more suitable for their use than the old strains.

And so Samuel Krajci's belief is firm that disaster can be used as a stepping stone to better things.

THIS WEEK IN Washington

THE NEW TAX BILL. Shellback of another congressional look at price control bill, step-up in military spending and production as result of world cut-back, sensations in veterans schooling probe, living cost increases, political bickering and possibility of an October adjournment date were high lights of Congress.

The Senate by a vote of 59 to 10 passed an army civil service bill, carrying authorization totaling $1,766,726,928, which set $729,341,000 below the budget request. In the meantime the house had passed the foreign military aid bill with less than anticipated, and the Senate foreign relations committee made a further slash and divided authority over the fund between the department of defense, the military, the CIA for economic aid, and the state department for front cover and other foreign assistance.

The House also passed a measure authorizing $1,025,000,000 for housing construction in defense areas over determined by the Dept. of Defense. It was voted up as follows: $50 million for government constructed housing, $60 million for economically facilities and services, $15 million for loans to prefabricated housing builders; $10 million for land condemnation in isolated areas and $10 billion for FHA mortgage insurance on privately constructed housing.

Observers here point out that in the Pick-Sloan plan for relief of floods in the Missouri river valley there is nothing but a patchwork development because there is no overall guiding plan. These same observers declare that the great demand for completion of dams and reservoirs, some of which are included in the civil functions bill, will be met at the expense of flooding great areas of farmland which under a more comprehensive plan would be perfectly usable. Some suggestion has been made that if the proposal of a Missouri Valley Authority is too all-inclusive, that a national committee be named with no axe to grind, to make recommendations, possibly for breaking down the authorities into smaller valleys such as the individual watersheds of the Kaw, the Platte, the Big Blue and other rivers.

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare.

In one of his recent syndicated columns, Frank R. Kent wrote, "If and when the story of the present era is calmly written it seems inevitable that the impartial historian should dwell most heavily upon the idiotic fiscal policy which, in defiance of reason and experience, the American government fatuously pursued while passing through its greatest crisis."

"This will indict not only its rulers, but the people of the country as well. For, primarily it is the fault of these that the Washington politicians have been permitted to undermine the Federal financial structure upon the strength of which depends our ability to defend ourselves in a situation where thoughtful men feel our greatest danger is from within rather than without."

As Mr. Kent also said, practically everyone seems agreed that rigid reduction in non-defense spending and the elimination of all government waste are made essential by the incredibly expensive arms program. The President and most other top men in the government have said as much. So have all the leading economists. So have most of the newspapers. So have politicians of all kinds and degrees. Yet almost nothing has been done — so far, it's all been talk, and then more spending.

Here Mr. Kent brings the primary blame home to the President. He observed, "Chief responsibility for this ghastly failure rests upon Mr. Truman. For, it is axiomatic that no real curtailment of expenditures or waste can be achieved by congress without White House leadership. Instead of providing that leadership the Truman weight has been used to frustrate congressional attempts at reduction. Publicly, he has urged his heads of bureaus and departments to cut down non-defense expenditures but privately he has permitted them to classify almost every activity as linked with defense."

There is no lack of detailed and authoritative blueprints for cutting the non-defense cost of government. Any number of organizations and individuals, from the Hoover Commission on down, have indicated the way in precise terms, not just generalities. In each case, they show how many billions of dollars can be pared without damaging any essential governmental function. It is true that some cuts have been made by a congress which was appalled by the size and scope of President's proposed budget. But these cuts have been of a relatively

From J. Alvar Camryn, Seattle, Wash.: I remember when horsepower was used to drive machinery. Even some tread mills which go way back in history. I remember many of the type using a bevel gear, and stepping over the drive shaft. Small treadmills were made for dogs to drive churning. My grandmother had one and "Shep" knew churning days and had to be routed from under the house.

From Thurman A. Smith, Taylor, Mich.: I remember during the eighties seeing a cowboy twist a lasso from horse-hair tail and made the long hair of cattle's tails. His implement was a forked stick with which he deftly manipulated the hair into a four-strand rope. Said he learned trick from a Sioux. The Indian used buffalo hair.

abhor waste and extravagance in government and say so on every possible occasion. This, incidentally, has put both Senators Byrd and Douglas in the White House desk.

As Mr. Kent pointed out, the President "is bitterly hostile to both."

It is clear as day that the cost of government and the tremendous expansion in the size and power of the sprawling Federal bureaucracy will be one of the two big issues in the next national election, foreign policy being the other. Many commentators, such as Mr. Kent, obviously feel that only the strongest possible public protest, as measured at the polls, and correct an intolerable situation.

RIGOGENO DAM CROSSING TO BE CLOSED TO TRAFFIC

The Maine Publicity Bureau has been notified by the Great Northern Paper Company that, effective Sept. 17, the dam on the Penobscot River West Branch will be closed to all vehicle traffic for an indefinite period, due to heavy construction work there.

Great Northern currently is building a large hydroelectric station below the dam, which holds back the waters of a large chain of lakes in north central Piscataquis County. The Great Northern 10-mile private road between Millinocket and Greenville has been open to the public for a number of years, except that a permit from the company, readily obtainable, was required to cross the road built over the top of Rigogeno Dam.

The stretch, mostly of ungravel, with frequent turn-outs, has been a favorite with tourists, fishermen and motorists, and much game usually may be encountered on the trip through the wilder areas. The road will continue to be open from Greenville to the Rigogeno Farm area and to Greenville via the dam from west. The latter route gives access to 142,422 acres. Baxter State Park from the south. Access to the northern side of the park is from Patten, on Route 31, to Elmwood Avenue over former State Park road to Burn Mountain. Construction of this road to Greendale Lake, expected within the next year, will provide easy access to the 100,000 acres of State Forest, largest public wilderness area in the East, with strategic, primitive sites.

All information desired and travel agencies are being sought of the Rigogeno Dam off by the Publicity Bureau.

FREEZER COOKIES

Cookies making begins in earnest about this time of year in homes where parents make a point for the cookie jar in returning from school. The cookie jar that used to be kept in the refrigerator, ready for busy up baking after school, is now empty and how often is it put to some purpose?

Enter the dough or the raw ingredients may be frozen several days if properly packaged. But enough to cause a wrap and take a place in the freezer. Hand冷冻器 require careful packaging to avoid being broken when foods are moved around in the freezer. Though certain or certain doughs may keep well for six months to a year in the freezer, the Home Experiment Station advises not more than three months storage for freshest flavor.

The following recipe for refrigerator cookies which can also be frozen follows:

Ingredients for 6 dozen cookies: 2 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup shortening, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla.

To make: Mix flour, soda and salt together. Cream shortening and sugars gradually and cream thoroughly. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly. Add vanilla and mix well. Cut in dry ingredients. Shape dough in rolls 3 inches in diameter.

To freeze before baking: Wrap rolls of dough closely in moisture-vapor-resistant wrapping seal with pressure tape, and freeze. Before baking thaw slightly in the refrigerator for 5 to 10 minutes.

To freeze after baking: Cut dough into thin slices and wrap in moisture-vapor-resistant wrapping seal with pressure tape, and freeze. Before baking thaw slightly in the refrigerator for 5 to 10 minutes.

THE BRIGHT LIGHTS

By Sallydale Wimbrow

"OH BOY!" said Mr. Timothy Hodges. "Oh Boy! I'm gonna get some chickens and maybe even a cow."

"A cow?" said his wife. "would scare me to death the first time it lowed in the middle of the night."

"And there's a perfect spot for a garden out back," he was deep in his own thoughts. "Do you suppose we could raise watermelons? I love watermelon."

"The idea!" his wife informed him "was to get away from city living, not to delve suddenly into farming."

"Yeah," he grimed, ashamed. "I can't believe it's finally happened. A place in the country. No more traffic streaming through my dream. No more bright lights haunting the bedroom every night, no more noise. Just peace and quiet!"

"Don't you think we'd better build a house, before we move in?" his wife asked.

Driving back to town, they discussed the house, a good substantial main building that would grow, as they could afford additions.

"And great big windows. Lots of them. We won't have to worry about what the neighbors see," he laughed. "We won't have any. Let's not even buy any curtains."

"The next thing I know, you'll decide to just pitch a tent," Louise Hodges said. "Remember, we are still civilized people."

"Say—if means being civilized to me, for the first time, really civilized. To live a private life. Do you know, Lou, these past couple of months I've had to control a strong urge to take a sling shot to every last in the city? That darned sign hanging on top of the restaurant—right in our window! I used to wake up thinking I was back in the war zone, with incendiary bombs bursting all around me."

"Yes, Darling," she replied softly. "I know, and it is wonderful. We've worked long and hard for this. I'm glad you're so enthused. I don't feel so silly about being all excited myself."

He put one arm around her shoulder and hugged her as he drove along.

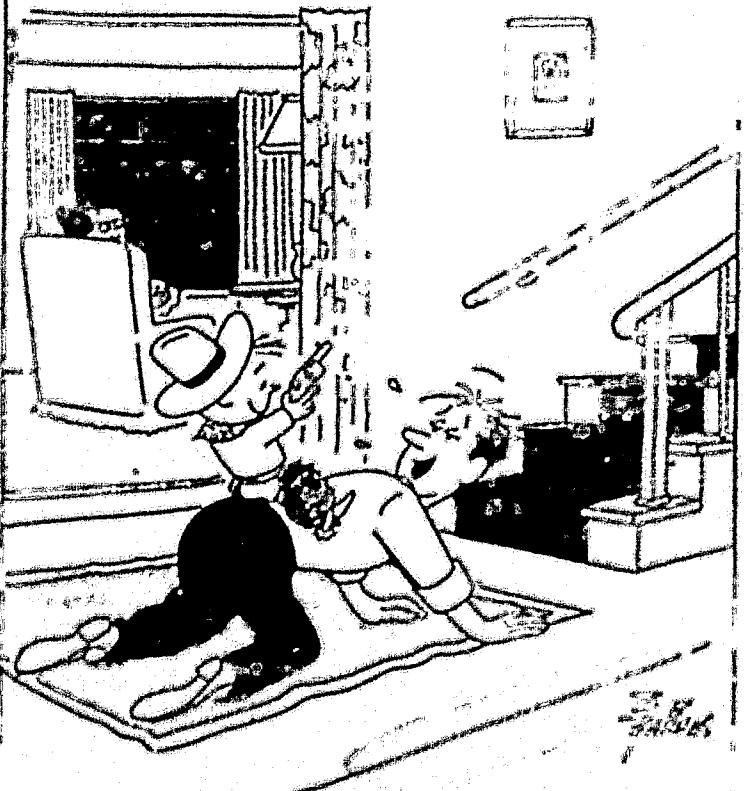

"Well," he said, "it won't be long now."

Every evening they went to watch the house grow. Lou mentally planted flower beds around it, and Tim grew the best watermelons in the country. Now and then, they lingered until it grew completely dark, to watch the stars appear and wink at them.

"See how bright they are with no competition?" Tim asked.

"As though they share a secret
